

BRAGG GETS PLACE ON SCHOOL FACULTY

Former Playground Coach to Be Student and Teacher in Missouri College.

Paul C. Bragg's prayer is answered.

He wanted a college education, and his friends were trying hard to have the Carnegie hero fund provide it, because he had saved several persons from drowning.

But now he won't need the hero fund scholarship, for he's going to work his way through St. Charles Military School, in Missouri. He will be boxing and wrestling instructor for the school, and, in return for this work will receive a four years' course in the medical department.

Bragg, though under twenty years of age, has a list of heroic rescues from drowning to his credit, and his fame as an athlete is widespread.

"I want to go to school," he said recently, after some of his friends had suggested a Carnegie hero fund scholarship in recognition of his latest rescue—saving a D. C. guardman from the Shenandoah river during the annual encampment at Harpers Ferry. "I'd do anything if I could only have an education. I haven't had very much chance so far, but I do want more than anything in the world to have a college training."

Now he can have it, and in return for work that is play to him. Bragg formerly had charge of the local playgrounds baseball team, and played with the Mt. Royals from 1909. He was also a member of the R. P. Andrews team in the Postoffice League, and was prominent in Y. M. C. A. athletics. His specialty has been boxing and wrestling.

He holds a bravery cup, presented to him through The Times, in recognition of his work in saving a commercial traveler from drowning last year at Colonial Beach.

Country's Oldest Miller Calls at White House

Introduced to the President today by Speaker Champ Clark as the oldest miller in the United States, William Pollock, of Missouri, eighty-three years of age, told the Chief Executive that a duty should be placed on flour and wheat in the Underwood tariff bill. Pollock told the President that he had been a miller for sixty-nine years, having started to work at the age of fourteen.

President Wilson listened attentively and explained that the bill was now in conference between the committees of the two houses, and that any proposals for changes should be laid before the conference.

James E. Willard, the new American ambassador to Spain, called on the President to say good-by before sailing for his post next Tuesday.

Henry Will Represent Wilson at San Diego

Congressman Robert L. Henry of Texas has been selected by President Wilson to make the oration on behalf of the Government on the dedication of a site for the Balboa monument at San Diego the latter part of this month.

From September 24 to 27 celebration will be held at San Diego in honor of the civilization of the American continent, and sites will also be dedicated for a monument to Cabrillo and a cross in honor of Father Junipero Serra.

The celebration will be a large affair, and King Alfonso of Spain has directed the Spanish ambassador in Washington to make the address at the Cabrillo dedication, when Senator Works of California will also speak. Bishop Conaty, of the diocese of Monterey, will make the Serra address.

D. C. Coffey, who has been in Washington making arrangements for speakers, has obtained the promise of Secretary Daniels to furnish two warships and six torpedo boat destroyers with marines to take part in the naval review and land parades.

Favorable Report on Senator O'Gorman's Bill

Senator O'Gorman's bill providing relief for congested district courts in the second circuit, which embraces New York, was favorably reported by the House Judiciary Committee today. The bill authorizes the senior circuit judge of the second circuit to designate district judges from another circuit to officiate in the second circuit in the event of congestion in any of its courts. The bill has passed the Senate.

PLANS OF DANIELS ARE MADE PUBLIC

Secretary of Navy Points Out
Advantages Coming to Those Who Enlist.

In order to persuade the country at large that service in the enlisted ranks of the navy is not entirely military, and that young men in joining will have opportunity to learn profitable trades, Secretary Daniels today made public the various objects sought to be attained in the reorganization of the Naval Training Schools. These objects, he said, are as follows:

To raise the standard of the enlisted personnel of the navy.

To encourage every man to select some branch or trade which he may follow in the service, and which may fit him for civil life in case he does not re-enlist.

To increase the contentment and awaken the zealous interests of the enlisted force by making it plain to them that the Navy Department and the officers of the navy have the true interests of the men and their advancement and welfare ever in mind.

To convince the people at large that service in the navy is not purely and exclusively military—that the time of the enlisted man is not completely given up to occupations that unfit him for civil pursuits, but that he is the gainer, not only physically and mentally, but in many practical matters that affect his success in life. In other words, the new plan is calculated to convince both the men and their next of kin that the navy is in truth a manual training school, and that service afloat is an educational advantage to those who enlist.

It is believed that great benefit to the navy will result from bringing the people in closer touch and sympathy with the service, that desertions may be diminished in number, and that a different mental attitude toward the naval service may be created by the system outlined.

Sympathy Strike in Dublin.

DUBLIN, Sept. 17.—Ten thousand men were on strike today in Dublin, in sympathy with the transport workers' walk out, and it was predicted that 6,000 additional workers would be thrown out of employment, because their callings depend on trades that are striking.
